Final reports of ambassadors to parliament

The following short brief answers the question whether a German ambassador is obligated to deliver a final report after the termination of his mandate.

In Germany, there is no such thing as a formal final report by an ambassador upon returning to Germany. Neither the Foreign Office's internal rules nor any other legal provision make such a report upon return of the former ambassador mandatory.

Neither the nomination for nor the termination of a tenure as ambassador are a parliamentary matter. As there is no mandatory final report, none could be discussed in parliament.
